François Wasselin Named Head of Infrastructure, Will Lead American Global's New Center of Excellence

American Global appoints François Wasselin, former Alternative Delivery Practice Leader to spearhead a new Center of Excellence initiative.

Whippany, NJ - American Global proudly announces that François Wasselin has been appointed Head of Infrastructure, where he will lead the firm's newly formed Center of Excellence for Infrastructure. As former Senior Vice President and leader of American Global's Alternative Delivery Practice, François employed his engineering background and insurance experience to help clients with major insurance placements, guided risk allocation discussions and the development of risk management solutions. During his career, he has worked directly on some of the world's largest and most transformative construction and infrastructure projects, specializing in alternative delivery methods including design-build, design-bid-build, public private partnerships, and more. François has earned a reputation in the industry as a well-respected and trusted advisor.

In his new role, François will expand the Center's reach and resources while continuing his work alongside colleagues like Caryn Maxfield, whose deep construction knowledge, negotiation skills and expert legal advice, make her a key senior member of the new American Global Center of Excellence.

Chief executives at American Global view the Center as a logical next step in the evolution of the firm. CEO Michael Marino said, "François' distinct and diverse experience makes him uniquely qualified to spearhead this important initiative." David Marino, President & COO added, "François has the ability to assemble a wide range of talented professionals who will work collaboratively to move the industry forward with fresh new solutions."

François is excited about the opportunity this presents. "As a broker known for innovative thinking, this Center of Excellence will further solidify American Global's position as a thought leader in the construction and infrastructure industry to which we are fully dedicated." He continued, "The expansion of our infrastructure team will broaden both our knowledge base and perspective, enabling us to provide clients with superior guidance, solutions and resources."

Under François' leadership, American Global's new Center of Excellence will:

- Provide project sponsors and key constituents with risk management advice during development, design, construction, and operational phases of the lifecycle of infrastructure projects
- Support both insurable and non-insurable risk profiles.
- Advise on M&A risks and strategies
- Bring thought leadership to the sector to innovate on emerging trends
- Leverage data, analytics and AI to bring timely insights
- Look after opportunities with a focus on North and Latin American projects

American Global congratulates François on his new role and is proud to celebrate this exciting milestone as we move forward into our next decade of service and continue to revolutionize the role of broker.
