American Global Launches C-RISQ SDI Module, Bringing Greater Efficiency, Visibility and Control to Subcontractor Default Insurance

Leveraging our innovative SDI solution, clients will benefit from simplified and centralized SDI program management as well as enhanced reporting capabilities that help contractors make more informed risk management decisions.

Jericho, NY – American Global is excited to announce the launch of its new SDI Module for C-RISQ — an innovative solution designed to transform how contractors administer, monitor and manage their SDI programs. The new technology will be premiered for a select group of construction and insurance industry professionals during an exclusive reception on Tuesday, October 27th at the Gaylord National Hotel, coinciding with IRMI's Construction Risk Conference.

Developed to address program complexities and intensive manual administration associated with SDI management, this proprietary technology brings together enrollment, program administration, reporting and oversight into one centralized, secure platform. By automating time-consuming processes and improving access to critical program information, the module provides a single interface for managing SDI activities, helping contractors spend less time managing paperwork and more time focusing on the risks that matter most.

Key benefits include streamlined project enrollment, subcontractor reporting, centralized program administration, automated data organization and reconciliation, and enhanced analytics. The module also provides greater visibility across a client's entire SDI portfolio, allowing contractors to monitor subcontractor participation, enrollment status and program activity across multiple projects from one convenient location.

Kristen Weber, Vice President and Head of SDI for American Global, said, "Subcontractor Default Insurance is an increasingly important risk management tool for contractors, but administering these programs can be complex and resource intensive. With our C-RISQ SDI Module, we're changing that. By bringing critical information and processes together in one place, we're helping clients eliminate unnecessary administrative burdens, gain greater visibility into their SDI programs and make better-informed decisions."

COO David Marino added, “This is a major step forward in how we support our clients, allowing them to focus less on managing their SDI program and more on proactively managing subcontractor risk. We're incredibly excited about the value this technology will bring to our clients.”

The launch of the SDI Module is further evidence of American Global's continued investment in technology and our commitment to remain an industry leader of innovative solutions. The powerful combination of advanced technology, together with our team's expertise, strengthens American Global's ability to deliver advanced tools and meaningful, value-added support for clients.
